

Anthony E. Dziepak

Biography

Version of December 29, 2025

Anthony E. Dziepak is former lead economist at The MITRE Corporation. His research goal is to lead the application of an industrial organization focus to inform policy decisions on economic questions using theoretical, empirical, and experimental methods. He received his undergraduate and graduate education from Case Western Reserve University and Virginia Tech. He previously taught at Florida Atlantic University and The Catholic University of America. He served as a business strategist for the Federal Aviation Administration's Air Traffic Organization, where he studied financial and operational impacts of the civil aviation industry. His research fields are spatial economics, experimental economics, and industrial organization.